

Expression of Interest for CDU-HREC Volunteer Position: Health Representative

The Human Research Ethics Committee (HREC) of the Charles Darwin University reviews projects and other activities undertaken at the University which involve research conducted with or about people. The committee consists of a mixture of University staff and community members covering various areas of expertise and membership categories as determined by the 'National Statement on Ethical Conduct in Human Research'.

The University is currently seeking applications from persons who are:

- A person with knowledge of, and current experience in, the professional care or treatment of people; for example, a nurse, counsellor, psychologist or allied health professional;
- Ability to recognise and to debate ethical issues;
- Availability to attend schedule CDU-HREC Meetings;
- Availability to undertake up to six hours reading preparation per meeting;
- An interest in human research ethics.

The HREC meets seven times each year (on a Wednesday, approximately every six weeks), from 9am until approximately midday, depending on the number and quality of projects.

Whilst members receive no remuneration, the responsibilities are not onerous, and the experience can be extremely rewarding. The meetings are held at CDU Casuarina Campus; however, they can also be attended via Zoom.
